Public-Private Partnerships

Working together with government, business can help realize projects that contribute to an area's economic progress and set the stage for future growth. Public-private partnerships allow communities to realize their potential by collaborating with those who offer leadership and resources to guide land use, infrastructure, and investment decisions that lead to healthy regional improvement.

A frequent partner in community projects, High has participated in Lancaster's economic revitalization since the 1970s with the introduction of Old Town Lancaster which restored a historic neighborhood, preserving the character of the city. Recent projects include the award-winning integrated Lancaster Marriott at Penn Square and Lancaster County Convention Center, an economic engine within Lancaster City, and The Crossings at Conestoga Creek, a lifestyle-oriented mixed-use development that brought needed stormwater and roadway improvements to the western gateway to the city.
